ACTION FOR ORCAS, SALMON, AND OUR FUTURE

Saturday, Oct. 19, over 2,300 people put on their rubber boots and ventured out in uncertain weather to participate in 65 events across the Puget Sound extending south to Northern California, east to Idaho and north to British Columbia. The day was officially proclaimed Orca Recovery Day by Gov. Jay Inslee, and it was a region-wide day of action to improve the living conditions of our endangered southern resident orcas and their main food source – salmon.

In the Puget Sound Region, Orca Recovery Day highlighted the connection between our activities on land and the effect they have on surrounding waters and marine life, including orcas. Local conservation districts launched a new "Better Ground" campaign to reinforce the connection between ground and sound. Events included work parties on salmon streams and along shorelines, rain garden restoration events, educational workshops, beach clean-ups, and more. Volunteers of every age came out to take action for the orcas. Region-wide information about the events can be found at betterground.org.

Almost 17,000 native plants were installed along shorelines and riparian areas. Native plants provide shade, erosion control, and noxious weed suppression for salmon streams as well as bays and coves where salmon can be found. Cornet Bay is one area where juvenile salmon stop to eat, rest, and seek refuge on their journey to the ocean. Five years ago, a 1,600-foot section of Cornet Bay shoreline was restored to increase critical nearshore habitat for juvenile salmon by removing creosoted bulkheads, re-grading the beach to match the natural contour, and installing native shoreline vegetation. The Orca Recovery Day work party at Cornet Bay planted an additional 229 native plants along the shoreline to complete a long term project that has seen positive, measurable results.

With help from the Northwest Straits Foundation and Island County Marine Resources Committee, the Sunlight Shores community in Clinton voluntarily removed 350 feet of hard armoring along their shared shoreline, replacing it with a natural shoreline of sand, driftwood, and native vegetation. This past spring, they planted the first round of native plants on their new natural shoreline, and on Orca Recovery Day, they led another round of planting for volunteers. Replacing hard armor with a natural shoreline connects the nearshore to backshore and upland habitats, restoring a piece of marine ecosystem. Native vegetation provides shade and insects that are critical to juvenile salmon, which are in turn critical to orca survival.

In Langley, the Orca Network went into seventh grade classrooms, educating students about the impacts humans have on orcas and how we can reduce those impacts through storm water improvement, boat noise reduction, and volunteering. Then, the students met up on Orca Recovery Day to remove 25 pounds of trash from the beach in Langley. That's a lot of trash!

At Greenbank Farm, WSU Extension Master Gardeners led volunteers in restoring a rain garden which had been installed in 2012. Over time, weeds and grass had encroached on the rain garden's edges, and a vigorous Dwarf Blue Arctic Willow had taken over the entire area, pushing out the other native plants that had originally been planted there. The work party weeded, added new mulch, and planted new plants.

Rain gardens are one way excess rainwater can be stored during a storm. Rather than allowing all the extra water to run off the property into storm drains, ditches and the ocean, rain gardens catch some of the water, filter it, and allow it to slowly drain over time. Retaining storm water through rain gardens, swales, and rain barrels improves the quality of water that is draining into our waterways, which improves the homes of salmon and orcas.

Orca Recovery Day was a wonderful way to come together as a community, an island, and a region. It showed just how much we can do when we work together to improve water quality and marine life habitat. Let's keep the momentum going and look ahead at taking more actions.

Work parties take place all year long along shorelines, bluffs, salmon streams, and wetlands. Many organizations on Whidbey Island and the surrounding area need volunteers to help remove noxious weeds and plant native vegetation. Some of those organizations include Northwest Straits Foundation, Skagit Fisheries Enhancement Group, Island County Marine Resources Committee, Washington State Parks and Whidbey Camano Land Trust, but these are only a few of the organizations working to improve the marine environment. There are so many volunteer opportunities out there!

On individual properties, we can help the orcas by improving the quality of the rainwater that leaves our land. Keeping pollutants, fertilizers and chemicals, and trash from being washed off our properties and into the ocean is an important action we can all take in our daily lives.

As a community, our actions have put the southern resident orcas on the critically endangered list. As a community, we can work together to return the Salish Sea to it's former, biodiverse glory and protect the orcas, the salmon, and all other marine wildlife. When we work to create better ground for the orcas, we're also creating better ground for ourselves.

ON TRACK

with Jim Freeman

In an effort to improve the warmth of my 91-year-young Milwaukee Road caboose, I made an attempt to re-close some of the non-closed areas.

Do not call for my help on home repair unless you want a repeat repair.

The outdoor transient mice have now told their friends and many of their cousins of what apparently has become new public access. The mouse petitions for ingress and egress were approved.

I just wish they would egress to some other ingress, which rhymes with a mess.

Mouse tracks

Whoever said mice were cute must have only seen them in vibrant color with Tom and Jerry.

There is nothing cute about nocturnal greetings seen in the morning, or the fast pass of a shadow against the wall before their nighttime day begins.

For this reason, no wonder Mom flushed my 8th grade science fair project mouse. She probably used a hot pad to catch that little critter.

Mom was really good with hot pads.

The science fair project mouse had escaped from Dad's handmade maze. Operator error again. I had not secured the mesh roof after feeding my science fair friend before riding my bike to school to eat pickle sandwiches for lunch.

It is difficult to win anything at the science fair when one lies.

Apparently, mice have maze patterns with their non-maze personalities. These patterns were not reflected on my poster or with my synopsis. Unaware of those tendencies, it was necessary for me to come clean with the judge that the test mouse had not actually run all the tests stated, thereby falsifying the results on my poster board.

Mom had done such nice printing on that poster. Printing drove me to cursive at a young age so Mom always had to ghost print for me in junior and senior high school.

Would she do jail time for that today?

While I did not have to go to the principal's office for a "What kind of person do you think you are?" lecture, I did not get a laugh from the assistant principal when I told him I had only lied on my chart to finish the project because I was at a dead end, with a dead mouse.

No smiling. Thank you, Mr. Name Withheld.

Were he still writing, maybe Erle Stanley Gardner could use the mouse theme for a possible book. The Case of the Missing Mouse? The Case of the Royal Flush?

Okay, so let us move on. You may be eating.

Aisle love you

Speaking of food, like most locals returning from areas across the pond, stops at the mailbox or post office are often followed by a trip to the grocer for fresh milk.

Throw in a banana and some cereal and dinner is born.

Add toast to get another star on your non-Yelp entry.

Having been gone a sufficient time last month, what a surprise to see the new layout at Payless.

Organic and inorganic have integrated. For dedicated bulkers, aisle one is a treasure trove of little bitty things I never buy.

Years ago, I bought too many generic M and M flavored trail mixes.

My wisdom teeth got dizzy from chewing. No one wants slow wisdom teeth.

Payless store and grocery guru Tom Brown must have stayed awake for months figuring out all the combinations. As a lover of grocery stores, I have often wondered why some items that go together are so far apart in a store.

Tom and crew have fixed that. Like things are together. Pasta is with sauces. Condiments are with bread. The breakfast aisle is great even if you don't eat breakfast. Just walk it for the colors.

Organic products are on green shelves. This makes it easy for me as long as I remember the color green. Should be easy to do in the Evergreen State.

I seldom eat organic as doing so interferes with my processed and frozen food regimen. My family likes to think of my eating preferences as the No Thanks Diet or the I Am Not Hungry Yet Diet.

I figure if I could survive the B1 unit of our Marine Corps C-Rations, I can handle Aunt Stouffer.

Yep. My last trip to Payless was as customer service Autumn said it would be – A treasure hunt of fun.

Nancy Thelen still has sore wrists from re-doing every sign above every aisle. All seventeen aisles. I am not counting aisle 0 because 0 does not count.

0 is the bulk aisle. After gaining 39 pounds in nine weeks in Marine Corps boot camp, I refuse to walk down a bulk aisle. I was in a bulk formation. Never again. Now I am back to my wrestling weight. Only now, instead of wrestling on my mat, I take naps on my mat.

According to my first newly organized Payless receipt, even without a smart phone, I was a smart shopper. I saved $11.41. Of course, I spent $84.47 to get there. How smart is that?

Considering the fun I had, it is still a deal. I went down aisles I have never seen. I even bought my first ever bottle brush. Not cheap, but durable enough given I only have the one bottle.

Some of my favorite items are still available. Pickles on aisle 1. Scouring pads, aisle 9. Beef jerky, aisle 3. Booze is still close to the door.

We milk drinkers still have to walk the length of the frozen foods to get to the dairy cooler. No biggie for me. I love the frozen foods section. This is where the men are. Also, since I am a frozen food whisperer, I can even hear the frozen gravy screaming to be liberated.

Apart from the adjustment many of us seniors and older juniors have to make with any change, the realization is good things still come to those who wait, even if you are in line.

Caveat to any rookies. Nuts for baking are located on aisle 5. Nuts for snacking are located on aisle 11. Don't go nuts looking for them.

The rest of the nuts are at checkout.

Plausible possibilities

While no contracts have yet been signed, it appears, negotiations aside, my return to serious theater is a plausible possibility.

Why serious?

Because that is why it is called acting. I have to act to be serious.

My audition tape apparently jammed the producer's smart phone. I had sent it via Twitter instead of Instagram. Somewhere along the way, my tweet ended up in a thrift store.

I will not tell you the exactness of my speculations until they are confirmed with verisimilitude.

I had to look that word up since it sounded like a digestive aid.

If my audition tape can get re-sent, and if the producer thinks I am able, and if I can learn my lines before I am supposed to, I can showcase my serious side.

Stay tuned. If I get the gig, I may not get a Tony, but I may get a Tiny.

My scene may be the shortest in the play. Something about my memory.

Where Do They Go from Here? How, Why, When and Where Birds Migrate

"There is still much we do not understand about how and why birds migrate in the spring and fall, but with GPS (Global Positioning System) sensors and other technology, many of the pieces of the puzzle are now in place," says Connie Sidles of Seattle Audubon Society. Sidles is presenting the latest research and information about bird migration at the general meeting of the Whidbey Audubon Society Thursday at 7:30PM. The program is free and open to the public, but attendees are advised to arrive by 7:00PM for refreshments and to find a seat. The meeting, followed by Sidles' program, is at the Unitarian Universalist Congregation meeting house just north of Freeland, 20103 State Route 525. She will address questions such as where do birds go in the fall to get away from the Pacific Northwest winter? How do they know when to go? How do they find their way? What motivates them? What do they face on their long journeys?

Connie Sidles is a master birder, former member of Seattle Audubon's Board of Directors, former chair of Seattle Audubon's Conservation Committee, current chair of Seattle Audubon's Publications Committee and author of five books about birds and nature. She currently teaches classes about birds at Bellevue College, Seattle Audubon and the University of Washington. She is founder and president of Constancy Press LLC, a small publishing house specializing in nature books. Several of her titles will be available for sale and to be signed at the meeting.

For her 70th birthday, her husband gave her the gift of a Year of Adventure. So far, she has been to the short grass prairies of Saskatchewan, the edge of the continental shelf at sea, the wilds of Pinnacles National Park and the Grand Canyon and a moth concert with solos by wax moths. She will be fresh from an adventure exploring the native forests, dry lands and open ocean of the Big Island of Hawaii, where she hopes to see the birds that migrate across the Pacific.

Oak Harbor Lions Club Gives Back to local Veteran Service Organizations

Nov. 6, 2019, the Oak Harbor Lions Club reflected on its 2019 Memorial Day Program: A Service to Remember, which was ranked this year by CNN as one of the "Top Ten" best places to go on Memorial Day weekend in the U.S. During this inaugural event, which was co-hosted by VFW Post 7392, Lions received cash donations and services from local businesses. At the regular meeting held Wednesday, the Lions were able to thank and donate back nearly $1,000 to Oak Harbor's local veteran service organizations, including the Veterans of Foreign Wars, American Legion, and Fleet Reserve Association.

"I appreciated everyone's diligent efforts to participate this year; as a base community coming together, I am always excited at the prospect of what we can do when we team up. Thank you for joining us this past Memorial Day to remember those who have sacrificed their all," said Kelly Davidson, event organizer.

Bringing kind-hearted, philanthropic-minded people together to serve its communities is what Lions clubs are all about. The Oak Harbor Lions raise funds with their annual flag project, fruit and produce sales, and an annual Christmas tree sale. Monthly, the Oak Harbor Lions raise and lower American flags along the streets of Oak Harbor in front of local businesses which support the Lions and pay a yearly fee for it. Other services offered by the Oak Harbor Lions include hearing and vision screenings, providing those in need with glasses and hearing aids. Members also lend medical equipment to individuals maintaining independence, free of charge and construct wheelchair ramps, fences, and community playgrounds. Two scholarships, academic and vocational, are presented to OHHS students annually. As a service club, it is continually seeking ways to aid those in the community. It also supports other nonprofits with yearly donations, such as Help House.

Interested in learning more? The Oak Harbor Lions meet Wednesdays, at 7:00PM at the Oak Harbor Elks Lodge. Meetings are open to all community members who have a heart to represent the Lions' motto: "WE SERVE."

NAS Whidbey SAR Conducts Rescue Over Veterans Day Weekend

A Search and Rescue (SAR) team from Naval Air Station (NAS) Whidbey Island conducted a rescue southeast of Arlington, Wash., the morning of Nov. 9, 2019.

The SAR crew responded to a call to transport a 49-year-old male suffering from injuries related to an ATV accident the night prior.

The SAR crew arrived at the patient's location at approximately 7:45AM where local fire and sheriff personnel were on scene. The patient

What Can Investors Learn from Veterans?

Each year, Veterans Day allows us to show our respect for the sacrifices that military veterans have made for our country. But have you ever stopped to think about what lessons our veterans can teach us about how we conduct various aspects of our lives? For example, consider the following traits and how they might apply to your actions as an investor:

Perseverance – Even veterans who have not served in armed combat have had to persevere in challenging situations. The military life is not an easy one, as it often involves frequent moves, living in foreign countries, time away from loved ones, and so on. As an investor, in what ways do you need to show perseverance? For one thing, you'll need to stick it out even in the face of volatile markets and short-term losses. And you'll need the discipline to make investing a top priority throughout your life, even with all the other financial demands you face.

Willingness to learn and adapt – During the course of their service, military veterans frequently need to learn new skills for their deployments. Furthermore, living as they often do in foreign countries, they must adapt to new cultures and customs. When you invest, you're learning new things, not only about changes in the economic environment and new investment opportunities, but also about yourself – your risk tolerance, your investment preferences, and your views about your ideal retirement lifestyle. Your ability to learn new investment behaviors and to adapt to changing circumstances can help determine your long-term success.

Awareness of the "big picture" – All members of the military know that their individual duties, while perhaps highly specific, are nonetheless part of a much bigger picture – the security of their country. When you make an investment decision, it might seem relatively minor, but each move you make should contribute to your larger goals – college for your children (or grandchildren), a comfortable retirement, a legacy for your family or any other objective. And if you can keep in mind that your actions are all designed to help you meet these types of goals, you will find it easier to stay focused on your long-term investment strategy and not overreact to negative events, such as market downturns.

Sense of duty – It goes without saying that veterans and military personnel have felt, and still feel, a sense of duty. As an investor, you are trying to meet some personal goals, such as an enjoyable retirement lifestyle, but you, too, are acting with a sense of duty in some ways, because you're also investing to help your family. There are the obvious goals, like sending children to college or helping them start a business, but you're also making their lives easier by maintaining your financial independence throughout your life, freeing them of potential financial burdens. This can be seen quite clearly when you take steps, such as purchasing long-term care insurance, to protect yourself from the potentially catastrophic costs of an extended nursing home stay.

Military veterans have a lot to teach us in many activities of life – and investing is one of them. So, on Veterans Day, do what you can to honor our veterans and follow their behaviors as you chart your own financial future.

A SAR team also conducted a medical evacuation (MEDEVAC) from Orcas Island, Wash., in the early morning hours of Nov. 6, 2019.

The SAR crew responded to a call to transport a 47-year-old male suffering from head injuries from Orcas Island Airport to Harborview Medical Center in Seattle.

The SAR crew arrived at Orcas Island Airport at approximately 1:45AM where they picked up the patient. The patient was transported to Harborview Medical Center, where they landed by approximately 2:20AM.

Naval Air Station Whidbey Island SAR has conducted 40 total missions throughout Washington State this year, including 12 searches, 16 rescues and 12 medical evacuations.

The Navy SAR unit operates three MH-60S helicopters from NAS Whidbey Island as search and rescue/medical evacuation (SAR/MEDEVAC) platforms for the EA-18G aircraft as well as other squadrons and personnel assigned to the installation. Pursuant to the National SAR Plan of the United States, the unit may also be used for civil SAR/MEDEVAC needs to the fullest extent practicable on a non-interference basis with primary military duties according to applicable national directives, plans, guidelines and agreements; specifically, the unit may launch in response to tasking by the Air Force Rescue Coordination Center (based on a Washington State Memorandum of Understanding) for inland missions, and/or tasking by the United States Coast Guard for all other aeronautical and maritime regions, when other assets are unavailable.

Larsen Encourages Washingtonians to Get Covered During Open Enrollment

Rep. Rick Larsen (WA-02) is encouraging Washingtonians to sign up for health insurance for 2020 under the Affordable Care Act. The Affordable Care Act was enacted in 2010 and continues to help thousands of people across Northwest Washington access high-quality, comprehensive health care.

Mobile Turkey Unit puts the giving in Thanksgiving

By Kathy Reed Whidbey Weekly

There is absolutely no reason anyone on Whidbey Island should go without a proper Thanksgiving meal this year, thanks to the giving hearts and attitudes of many volunteers who call this island home.

Take Whidbey's Mobile Turkey Unit, which has been delivering meals on Thanksgiving Day for 21 years now.

"Nobody living on Whidbey Island needs to go without a meal," said Gwendine Norton, co-president of the Mobile Turkey Unit's board of directors.

MTU serves South Whidbey and Coupeville. Combined with North Whidbey Community Harvest in Oak Harbor and various churches and organizations that also provide meals, no one on Whidbey should go hungry on Thanksgiving.

"For an entire community to be covered in this way is pretty remarkable," Norton said. "What other community can claim that?"

Last year MTU delivered 550 Thanksgiving dinners and is on track to do at least that many this year. Meals include all the traditional fixings: Turkey, stuffing, mashed potatoes and gravy, green beans, cranberry sauce and even pumpkin pie. MTU volunteers use the kitchen facilities at St. Hubert's Catholic Church in Langley to do the cooking prior to the big day, then meals are packed up and sent out with about 50-60 volunteer drivers for delivery. After 21 years, it's a well-oiled machine, although that's not to say there haven't been a few growing pains.

"I'm told when MTU started 21 years ago they delivered about 25 meals," Norton said. "At the time I joined eight years ago, they were serving over 300 meals and were still trying to do it same way. My husband and I were able to help make some adjustments and now we're co-presidents."

MTU became an official nonprofit organization two years ago. Within the past year, the group has been able to purchase a domain name and update its website, making it easy for people to request meals online, by phone or via forms that are found at various organizations. Norton said establishing the nonprofit and creating a board has helped in terms of organizing the event, but said none of it would be possible without the support of the community.

"We do this as a board, but 10 people cannot do it all," she said. "It's our community that does this. There are two different shifts of volunteers peeling potatoes, two different shifts cooking and slicing turkeys. Volunteers put cranberries

More than 100 volunteers give up a few hours of their time on Thanksgiving morning to fill plates with traditional turkey day meals, package them up and send them out for delivery with the Mobile Turkey Unit. The nonprofit organization provides more than 500 meals to people on South Whidbey and Coupeville, helping to ensure no one goes without a holiday meal.

in containers and slice all the pies and put them in individual containers. Another group comes in and puts all the rolls and butter together.

"And then on Thursday, it makes me cry every year," Norton said. "So many people come out. There's the serving line where they're dishing up the plates, the packing station, the zone table where helpers check to make sure everything is there, then there's the driver coordinator who is training all the drivers on what they need to know. Thursday morning there are well over 100 volunteers there giving up a portion of their morning to help us do this. It's the most heartwarming thing I've ever seen."

"On a day of giving thanks, this is a way to show our gratitude for this amazing community we love," said Island County Commissioner Helen Price Johnson, a longtime MTU volunteer and board member.

"My husband and I are proud of our work supporting the MTU," said Price Johnson. "The founder, Tom Arohontas, was a vivacious and caring man. As MTU board members, we try to carry on his vision to ensure no one in our community goes without a Thanksgiving meal. It's a wonderful large group of volunteers who come together each year to make that happen."

Mobile Turkey Unit

www.mobileturkeyunit.com • 360-321-9782

Those interested in volunteering can check the MTU website, where all volunteer opportunities are listed.

"Volunteers can sign up until all positions are full," said Norton. "We value their time. We know how many people it takes to cut pies and put in containers, so we have an idea how many people we need and about how long it will take. Anyone can sign up on the website and positions are changed every day as things get filled."

Norton said MTU's status as an official nonprofit has enabled the group to seek grant funding to purchase necessary items. It also allows the group to really try to keep it local.

"We never want people to feel they have to donate, so we actively seek grants from organizations like Goosefoot, South Whidbey Rotary," Norton explained. "This year we are getting all our turkeys, pies and rolls from the Goose. We've been doing some networking; Goosefoot gives us a grant, we turn around and spend it at the Goose. We're trying to do as much on island as possible."

MTU's goal has never wavered over the past 21 years. Today board members work with other organizations on the island to help identify those residents who may need help with a meal.

"Meals on Wheels, for instance, doesn't deliver on Thanksgiving. We work with Island County Housing Authority, Whidbey Island Nourish, Readiness to Learn Foundation, even the library," Norton said. "And for people without a permanent residence, we will have meals available at the Bayview Mobile and the Freeland Short Stop."

Anyone on South Whidbey up to Coupeville in need of a free Thanksgiving meal is encouraged to contact MTU either online at www.mobileturkeyunit.com or by phone at 360-321-9782.

"I feel lucky to be part of the leadership team of this group that started 21 years ago," said Norton. "But I'm only a part of it. I can take orders, do the planning and ordering, but without our community we couldn't do it. It's just an amazing morning."

Oak Harbor Elks Lodge

Request a meal or volunteer: 360-240-9499

The North Whidbey Community Harvest is an all-volunteer, nonprofit organization which provides a free Thanksgiving meal for thousands of Oak Harbor area residents each year at the Oak Harbor Elks Lodge. Meals are served from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Thanksgiving Day and delivery is also available for those unable to attend.

Anyone interested in volunteering, or anyone who cannot get to the Elks Lodge for a meal is asked to call 360-240-9499.

More than 4,000 people were served at the Elks Lodge last year and more than 400 meals were delivered to shut-ins, store employees, hospital staff and emergency responders working on the holiday. This meal is provided to anyone in the community at no charge, regardless of income or status.

Now in its 19th year, NWCH is in need of community support. As the event grows, so does the cost. Any individual or organization wishing to make a contribution can donate at the door, or send a donation to North Whidbey Community Harvest, in care of Skip Pohilla, 1090 SE Hathaway St., Oak Harbor, WA 98277. MAINTANENCE AND UP-KEEP Maintenance and up-keep of our safety gear, fishing tackle, and boat is essential for us here on Whidbey Island, especially for the people who boat and fish in the saltwater, even if only for a week during this year's Humpy season. There's only one word to describe saltwater and the corrosive effects it has on our gear: BRUTAL. If not tended to in a timely manner, saltwater exposure will turn even the best reel into a white, chalky heap if not cared for properly. Any metal zippers and button-snaps on your favorite backpack and life-vests will be welded shut for life if left alone for too long. Eyelets on your prize fishing rod will begin to turn from bright silver, gold, or glossy black to a pale, dusty turquoise green from salt corrosion. Small screws and bolts will snap off instead of backing out of their threads, electronics and copper wiring don't stand a chance against saltwater spray, and these are just a few of the little things that can be affected.

I've seen boat steering cables frozen solid at the motor; I've seen chrome plated hand railings crumble apart and entire painted boat trailers turned to rusty dust. I've seen trailer wheel bearings ground down so far the wheel wouldn't stay on the axle and one-and-a-half-inch axle spindles eaten down to the point they simply break off traveling down the road. Spring-steel leaf springs can crack and let loose of the axle and complete aluminum outdrives and outboard motor lower units can be eaten away and turned to powder. Saltwater cuts its way through cast iron intake and exhaust manifolds like a hot knife through butter. Over time, the destructive combination of saltwater and oxygen is unbelievable and costly. Our battle against corrosion seems fruitless; but don't give up hope - there are many products on the market and simple cleaning steps to keep money in our pockets and make fishing and boating an enjoyable event year after year.

Since I have spent every dime of my Lotto winnings and can't afford to pay someone else a salary to maintain my gear, I have learned a few things about how to win the battle over corrosion. I give this disclaimer right from the beginning: The products I mention from here on I use because they work for me and have helped me keep saltwater corrosion to a minimum and kept my gear in good working order. Freshwater is our biggest ally, a simple, thorough rinse with freshwater after each trip to the saltwater does wonders to dilute and flush salt out of fishing line, moving parts and off surfaces.

I use a product called Salt-away. This soapy solution neutralizes salt and helps keep salt crystals from forming inside my outboard engines. I also mix this soapy solution 50/50 with water in a squirt bottle and give my rods, reels, lures, and even zippers a complete misting with the mixture. Door handles, hatch latches, hinges, and basically any moving parts get a coating of soapy Salt-away. Zep Citrus heavy duty degreaser is an alternative I use alongside Salt-away. It's not as expensive and does not hurt aluminum and other surfaces. If you are considering buying a boat trailer in the future, insist on a galvanized one with a brake wash-down system attached. Also, if not already installed, purchase a set of bearing buddies. They attach to the wheel hub and allow you to pump grease into the wheel bearings. Oil bath bearing buddies are fairly new on the market and seem to do well as long as they stay intact and do not get damaged, allowing water to enter. Avoid painted trailers if you can; saltwater will cut their lives short. Fast Orange pumice hand cleaner is great for cleaning the greasy splashwell of my boat; I use a heavy sponge saturated with Fast Orange and work it around the motor mounts, steering cables and all other greasy areas.

I run Sea Foam motor treatment in all my boats. This fuel stabilizer has kept my motors running well even if they have been idle for a few months. Dielectric grease. After I have cleaned an electrical terminal or connector with a brass wire brush I put a coating of this grease on the connecting nuts and bolts. Vaseline will also work in a pinch - it's not water soluble and doesn't leave a black grease stain if you get some on your clothing. Mr. Clean magic eraser: This fine grit cleaning pad works well on grease-stained gunnels and black trailer roller marks as well as boat dock scuffs. I use Liquid Wrench penetrating liquid to coat the wench-strap or cable and the tongue jack; I also remove spark plugs and squirt Liquid Wrench into engine cylinders for long-term storage. It keeps compression rings from sticking and keeps moisture out. Teakwood Cleaner and Oil will remove the gray look from wood if you don't have time to sand it off and the teak oil helps keep it looking good once cleaned. If possible, remove all electronic devices from their bases and bring them inside and cover the open connectors with plastic or small tarps.

There are endless liquids, gels and cleaners on the market but the ones I have mentioned have proven themselves over time and help get me on the water when it's time to go fishing. If you decide to try any of the things I use, please read the manufacturers directions and always test the product on a small area first. No matter how hard we try to keep ahead of break-downs they are bound to happen, but every routine maintenance step you take with your fishing gear and boat can make a big difference catching fish and making it back home safely.

A few Marine areas are still open for crabs, the nicer weather has the rivers fishable again, but reports have been mixed. Keep an eye on the Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife website; they can change things suddenly. If you get out to fish be safe and GOOD LUCK out there!

Honoring Veterans

Kathy Reed/Whidbey Weekly
 Members of the Whidbey Island chapter of the Military Officers Association of America enlisted the aid of volunteers from Oak Harbor High School's NJROTC program to place flags on the graves of veterans at Maple Leaf Cemetery in Oak Harbor Saturday, in preparation for Monday's Veterans Day holiday. About 1,800 flags were placed at cemeteries from Anacortes to South Whidbey, something the MOAA has done for the past several years. A small ceremony was held at Maple Leaf before 600 flags were put in place at each veteran's grave. The ceremony included a NJROTC Color Guard as well as the playing of "Taps" by OHHS sophomore Matthias Anderson.

election results

Winners of the Nov. 5 general election can look forward to having the results certified before Thanksgiving – Nov. 26, to be exact.

All three Whidbey Island mayors retained their seats, although only Oak Harbor Mayor Bob Severns faced a challenger in the contest. Coupeville Mayor Molly Hughes and Langley Mayor Tim Callison were unopposed in the election, as were many city/town council and school board positions.

It appears several local measures have passed. A water management system improvement bond in Langley passed with an 80 percent margin. Voters in Oak Harbor approved the District 1 transportation benefit by a margin of just under 11 percent. Voters in South Whidbey also approved a bond for the Park and Recreation district with nearly 74 percent of the vote.

As of the last update at 6:26 p.m. last Friday, there were approximately 300 ballots still to be counted. That figure does not include ballots postmarked on or before election day that may continue to arrive through the mail, or ballots with signature issues to be corrected before they can be counted, according to the Island County website.

Here are the most recent results for the races Whidbey Weekly featured in its election guide, published last month. Ballots are scheduled to be counted again at 5 p.m. Friday, at which time updated figures will be posted on the county's website.

Complete results for all Island County races and measures are available through the auditor's office at island.wa.gov.

By Carey Ross

The Addams Family: Critics hate this movie, which means critics hate my movie-star boyfriend, Oscar Isaac, which just seems real rude if you ask me. ★★ (PG • 1 hr. 45 min.)

Arctic Dogs: In real life, arctic foxes build complex tunnel systems, use the Earth's magnetic field as a targeting system and are generally both cute and badass. On the big screen, they're named Swifty and are stuck in the mailroom looking for a promotion. What's the sequel going to be? Swifty's quest for middle management? Him fully vesting his 401k? ★ (PG • 1 hr. 33 min.)

Charlie's Angels: Does the world really need another reboot of Charlie and his Angels? Well, if it's written and directed by Elizabeth Banks, who also plays Bosley, I'm going to go ahead and say the answer to that question is yes. ★★★ (PG-13 • 1 hr. 58 min.)

The Current War: Director's Cut: This story about the feud between Thomas Edison and George Westinghouse premiered and was promptly panned at the Toronto International Film Festival a couple of years ago before becoming collateral damage of the Harvey Weinstein scandal that broke two weeks later. Now it's been recut and rereleased and is by all accounts a better movie for it. ★★★ (PG-13 • 1 hr. 41 min.)

Doctor Sleep: Stephen King's follow up to "The Shining" focuses on Danny Torrance (Ewan McGregor), 40 years after the events at the Overlook Hotel, and manages to capture much of the same creepiness of its predecessor. ★★★★★ (R • 2 hrs. 31 min.)

Ford v Ferrari: Ostensibly, this is about legendary car designer Carroll Shelby (Matt Damon), who, under the auspices of Ford and with the help of driver Ken Miles (Christian Bale), took on the Ferrari racing monopoly. Mostly it just looks like a couple of Oscar-winning actors driving fast cars and having the time of their lives doing it. ★★★★★ (PG-13 • 2 hrs. 32 min.)

The Good Liar: Sir Ian McKellen and Dame Helen Mirren appear on-screen for the first time opposite one another. He's a conman and she's the mark that's not as easy as she seems in this very proper British thriller with more than a few twists. ★★★ (R • 1 hr. 49 min.)

Jojo Rabbit: From the singular mind of Taika Waititi comes this story of a boy, his idiot imaginary friend Adolf Hitler (played by Taika Waititi) and all the satirical WWII hijinks they get up to. ★★★★★ (PG-13 • 1 hr. 48 min.)

Joker: If a gunman who reportedly identified with the Joker had not opened fire in a movie theater in Aurora, Colorado during a showing of "The Dark Knight Rises," killing 12 people and injuring 70 others, I might think this movie, which has been referred to as a blueprint for incels, was harmless entertainment. Holy hell, Hollywood, what are you thinking? ★ (R • 2 hrs. 2 min.)

Last Christmas: Not exactly a Christmas movie, more a Christmas-adjacent movie about a year-round elf who meets a boy and presumably they fall for each other. As far as I can tell, the only point of interest about this movie is it stars Emilia Clarke in her first post-Mother of Dragons role. ★★ (PG-13 • 1 hr. 42 min.)

The Lighthouse: Mostly, we get a lot of schlocky horror flicks this time of year, but every so often a real good one comes along, and this creepy tale starring Willem Dafoe and Robert Pattinson as lighthouse keepers on a mysterious island in 1890 is directed by "The Witch's" Robert Eggers and is definitely one of the good ones. ★★★★★ (R • 1 hr. 50 min.)

Midway: The Battle of Midway was a truly decisive World War II naval victory with an interesting backstory no movie directed by Roland Emmerich could adequately capture. The battle scenes will be real cool though. ★★ (PG-13 • 2 hrs. 18 min.)

Motherless Brooklyn: Edward Norton wrote, produced, directed and starred in this two-and-a-half-hour-long adaptation of Jonathan Lethem's bestselling detective story, so I think it's safe to say he really liked the book. ★★★ (R • 2 hrs. 24 min.)

Playing With Fire: John Cena leads a group of firefighters who have to babysit children because comedies really get to be that thinly premised these days. ★ (PG • 1 hr. 38 min.)

Terminator: Dark Fate: The last couple of installments in this franchise that is harder to kill than its title character were just plain bad. But I'm going to watch this one because it had the good sense to bring back and center the story on Sarah Connor. Welcome back to the big screen, Linda Hamilton. ★★★ (R • 2 hrs. 8 min.)

Zombieland: Double Tap: Because 2009's "Zombieland" was an unexpected hit, both critically and commercially, it gets a sequel. I have a feeling the cast—Woody Harrelson, Jesse Eisenberg, Emma Stone—stands a better chance with zombies than they do the dreaded sophomore slump. ★★★ (R • 1 hr. 39 min.)

Let's Dish!

with Kae Harris

A FINE LINE BETWEEN POSH AND POMPOUS

I love anything and everything to do with food. I enjoy reading about it, looking at photos of it, hearing stories about food and of course, eating it. I am always, always looking for new and exciting ways to prepare it, serve and eat it and it made me think about how this differs from place to place, budget to budget and cuisine to cuisine. I wondered if there were ways to take a regular, everyday staple and 'upgrade' it, so to speak, make it a little more 'haute cuisine' than what it started out as, and if it can be done, would you try to do it for any particular occasion? I know I find fun to be had in looking for ways to prepare and serve meals, especially if it's for a dinner party or ladies' night. It becomes a talking point and from there, endless ideas spring forth.

So, I was reading food articles, as I usually do, and one of them tickled me. It was about overly pretentious meals. I read about how the plating and serving can go from 'avant garde' to a ridiculous spectacle quite quickly. One of these stories spoke about how the serving platters were so confusing people couldn't tell what was food and what was decoration, so much so, one diner ate their napkin. Hilarious to read about, but then I wondered, how did the diner not realize the 'food' he was eating was flavorless? Maybe it was because the price of the meal was so egregious, he figured he'd get his money's worth and eat everything. Or perhaps this ostentatious meal was so outlandish in its serving style, it was just assumed it was appropriate to eat whatever was on the plate and not complain about the taste – like it was MEANT to taste like paper because it's an art. I hope it was a paper napkin; if it was a fabric serviette, I'd be both impressed and worried. Anyway, you can tell this highly amused me and I thought about the ways in which certain high-end restaurants word their menus, how food writers (maybe even me) describe their experience with a meal and the language itself that's used. I thought, 'are these descriptions always accurate or does the verbiage belie the reality?'

Some of the words I tend to stay away from are because I relate them to the actual act with which they're associated. For example, 'forage.'

"Freshly foraged, wild mushrooms."

I didn't actually do the foraging, therefore, I don't care if the packaging says it was 'freshly foraged.' I can't assert in my own writing I did the foraging, thus, I avoid using this word unless I can say, 'yes, I dug through the dirt myself for these yummy morsels of fungus!' Having said this, the terminology used when describing food can be persuasive. It can make you feel the pull of the fare a bit more through the use of specifically constructed writing.

That 'sumptuous sausage and lentil stew' sounds warm and inviting. It sounds thick and delicious and like I need some of this extravagance dished up into my stew bowl. Words are wonderful; they really can make or break something.

Yes, I do use French words when describing my food adventures, I admit. Sometimes, however, it really isn't all that easy to convey a point or a texture, WITHOUT actually using the correct culinary terminology which, a lot of the time, isn't English. 'Puree' is a prime example. How do you describe a puree using an English word? I'm sure there are ways, but would you be conveying exactly what texture and viscosity you're looking for? Personally, I don't think so. In any event, you're probably wondering what all this has to do with cooking and making meals and encouraging you to get creative and see if you can take a favorite food item and 'dress it up,' make it 'la-dee-dah.' And if you can, was the process enjoyable and did you and your loved ones enjoy the end product more or less?

I was thinking of several dishes in fact, that you can take up a notch and one of those was open-faced sandwiches. I know, it might not seem like it has much to do with the season, but it can be totally relevant. With Thanksgiving around the corner, you could do something different this year or plan a really elegant meal afterwards using up all your leftovers!

Perhaps you could take your turkey and cranberry sauce, and turn it into an open-face favorite, with a posh persuasion. Maybe you'll use brioche instead of sandwich bread and arrange the pieces of turkey atop it. Then you could drizzle over this, some cranberry sauce, neatly place sliced, grilled onions over the cranberry 'reduction' (see what I did there?) and finally you might like to add some brie or Gruyere cheese, grill until the cheese just melts and serve with some watercress for garnish on the side. (I'd eat it, but it's not surprising because I eat most things. I might have even eaten the napkin, a la the confused diner I mentioned earlier.) This is just one 'elegant' spin that can be put on using up Turkey Day leftovers and, you know what? If it means you get to have more loved ones come by for something out of the ordinary, to talk about for years yet to come, why not?

What are other ways you could bring some 'pomp and grandeur' into your home via your cooking? I know I tend to focus on quick and easy to do this, and a step-up on a sound staple doesn't mean it has to be time consuming. Seriously, open-faced sandwiches are the best way to do this. Serve ham at Thanksgiving? Use thick slices of French bread, herbed aioli and fancy cheese, grill and top with an egg and some parsley – et voila! Using up the ham with style!

Dear Readers, I hope you try an open-faced sandwich or two to make use of leftovers any time of year, and if you do, please let me know what it looked and tasted like! I'm including a recipe for turkey and apple open-faced sandwiches and if you try them, let me know if you like them as much as I do! It's a super seasonal delight, so I find it budget-friendly, too. Please send any and all comments, questions and definitely, recipes you might like to share to letsdish.whidbeyweekly@gmail.com and we can do just that and Dish!

Turkey and Apple Open-Face Sandwiches

1/3 to 1/2 lb. leftover turkey
1 medium apple, peeled, cored and thinly sliced
1/4 lb brie
2 to 4 slices of brioche or French bread
1 tablespoon salted butter, melted cranberry sauce to drizzle

Preheat the oven to 400°F and line a cookie sheet with foil. Brush the butter over the bread, then arrange the turkey to fit on top. Top the turkey with apple slices. Drizzle over some cranberry sauce and top with thin slices of brie cheese. Place in the oven and grill until the cheese has melted, remove from heat and allow to cool. Serve warm with a side of garlic aioli (it pairs surprisingly well!) or any sauce you think you'd like with it and enjoy!

CHICKEN LITTLE & THE ASTROLOGER

By Wesley Hallock

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

It may surprise you to learn that an Idea you find terribly exciting holds much less appeal for someone close to you. Your relationship with that person may be in urgent need of fine tuning as a result. Do not think that by simply ignoring the matter, you will make it go away. You're too closely connected to that other person to do anything but negotiate a meeting of minds. The 16th is crucial to the process.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

The other person in a smoothly running relationship may not be as content as you to relax and enjoy the good times. You would be wise to hear what they say, even if it seems they've picked an inappropriate time to say it. Your partner's misgivings over a possibly adverse future are at least worth a listen. Should nothing dire come to pass, you will at least have preserved the relationship. Watch the 16th for clues.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21)

Some of your moves this week may seem rather rough and tumble in the estimate of the people affected. The killjoy who objects most has a lot on his or her plate, so try not to take their objections personally. Inability to entertain the viewpoint of others is a sign that you are too narrowly focused on your goal for your own good. Anything that jars you alert to a new and wider perspective on the 16th works in your favor.

CANCER (June 22-July 22)

Your enthusiasm for attaining the thing you refuse to do without makes success more likely this week. Success comes always at a cost, of course, and only after the fact will you know whether it's worth what you paid. Even if the price feels too high, an emptiness will have been filled in the pursuit. Viewed so, you cannot help but win. A not-so-subtle message in that regard is a likely part of the 16th.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

Do you ever fear that the thing you've pursued so feverishly and for so long may never be yours? Don't despair. To quit now would be a pity. Your investment is far too great to even consider it. Fortunately, the winds are right this week for a mighty push toward your goal. The same circumstances that demand you go the extra mile are giving you the means to do it. Watch the 16th for a major momentum builder.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

Success is a relative thing this week. Run as hard as you can, and you might merely hold your place. This, in a time when all around you are losing ground, must qualify as success. More daring approaches remain to be tried, and necessity may drive you to risk one. In this way, success may yet be yours, but only if luck is with you. Prosperity must be measured against your own frugal standards on the 16th.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

Necessities this week may force you to adopt a view that is uncommonly broad and reaching. Chances are good that the old, local view of things no longer serves you. No matter what you are seeking, only by looking above and beyond can satisfaction be found. Exploring new territory is not without its risks, but those are a necessary part of the game. Small steps on the 16th hold big potential.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

Is your appetite for the finer things in life greater than your ability to satisfy it? The measure of your dissatisfaction will decide how hard you strive for more and better. If you're looking for an edge, don't discount the importance of giving more to get more. Giving can be accomplished in many ways. Just being fully present for those who need you qualifies. Watch on the 16th for the void that only you can fill.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

Some radical proposals are coming your way this week. Some of what you hear will excite you, and some may repulse, but it's unrealistic to pretend you can remain unaffected. Are you prepared to entertain ideas that are probably unprecedented in your experience? This is an important question. How you answer will impact your life now and into the future. Events on the 16th figure strongly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

Actions you take this week are magnified in ways that favor a positive outcome. Your chosen game matters less than the way you play it. Gusto is the keyword. Do what you do with gusto. Well-reasoned arguments, delivered with passion and conviction, carry an irresistible momentum. The impact of your action extends well beyond the action itself. Even so, results on the 16th may be more or less immediate.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb 18)

In your most important endeavors, the week bodes well for a positive outcome. Your good fortune owes much to the workings of a key partner. Who keeps you on track with unwavering strength when you might otherwise falter? You owe that person a debt of gratitude. Better if it's given freely. Withholding praise sends the haughty impression that you could have done everything yourself. Conduct yourself accordingly on the 16th.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

If your path to happiness is blocked, is it possible that you would do better on a different path? This is a good week to rethink what it is that brings you joy. If your ideas of what you want change, in that moment your path is changed. Get clear about what you want. Everything happening now is calculated to help you do exactly that. Heated discussions are possible on the 16th, when debates over paths and goals can't be avoided.

Al Koetje

Alvin Benedict "Al" Koetje passed away peacefully at home in Oak Harbor the evening of Oct. 28, 2019, surrounded by family and friends; he was 89 years old. Al was born in Oak Harbor June 20, 1930, to Benjamin and Henrietta "Hattie" (Meter) Koetje. Ben was the first Fire Chief for the City of Oak Harbor, appointed in 1930. Hattie passed away when Al was a teenager, Ben then married Margaret Hoekwater.

Al finished grade school in Oak Harbor, then attended Mount Vernon middle and high schools when the family moved there in 1944. He was an avid sports enthusiast, excelling in both baseball and basketball. A few years after high school, Al joined the Air Force and bravely served his country during the Korean War conflict, from 1951 to 1954. He was stationed in Japan for two-and-a-half years, then finished his service at Fairchild AFB in Spokane. He was awarded a basketball scholarship at Whitworth College, attending from 1954 to 1958, playing both baseball and basketball. In 1958, Al was a team captain for the basketball team and was selected as a Small College All American.

The City of Oak Harbor was taken by storm when Al graduated from Whitworth College. Al decided to return to Oak Harbor and join his older brother, Henry "Hank," in the insurance and real estate business. The Koetje Agency was very successful and is still in business to this day. Al chose this career in lieu of coaching basketball, although he did receive a coaching offer after college. Al was very involved with the community; his service in many ways is unprecedented. His extensive list of achievements includes: eight years as Oak Harbor council member, starting in 1964, 24 years as mayor, starting in 1972, president and member of the Navy League, president and member of the Association of Washington Cities, president and member of Rotary International (55 years of continuous attendance) and recipient of the Paul Harris Fellowship Award, inducted into the Skagit Valley College Hall of Fame in 1996 (Public Official and Strong Supporter of Education), and Best of Whidbey Lifetime Achievement Award in 2016.

Al was very thankful to the City of Oak Harbor and its constituents; it was with great pleasure he was given the opportunity to serve in this manner. He loved people, knew most by name, and would always exchange greetings, a story and a laugh. In his final days, he wanted to make sure the citizens of Oak Harbor knew how much he appreciated their support and how much he enjoyed the opportunity and journey to lead. City accomplishments under his leadership include: construction of the city marina, partnership for the construction of a new Skagit Valley College Library, the John Vanderzicht Swimming Pool, partnership with Naval Air Station Whidbey Island for construction of a domestic water pipeline, the Oak Harbor Senior Center and successfully keeping the Navy base off the base closure list for decades as committee chair for Save NASWI.

The most important things to Al were God, country, community and family. He was a member of the First Reformed Church in Oak Harbor for over 60 years, serving many years as a deacon and Sunday school teacher. Al loved serving his country and the people of the City of Oak Harbor, this was his greatest joy. Al was a beloved husband, father, grandfather and great-grandfather. He was loved by all for his kindness, generosity, quick wit and love of life. He really enjoyed those around him, laughter was always part of the equation.

Al always had a love for sports and bird hunting. He was a fierce competitor at baseball, basketball, tennis and handball. He always wanted to play someone better, to improve himself and hone his skills. Once he stepped on the court, small talk was over, it was time to show no mercy and compete! After the battle was over, he enjoyed discussing the events of the day "over a pop or a glass of milk," which was anything but. He loomed large amongst his family and friends; he touched many lives in a very positive and uplifting way. Al Koetje was exemplary as a celebration of life.

So now it is an end to an era, of a life lived to the fullest. Al would be the first to say "thank you" in all circumstances and was very appreciative of the blessings he received in life. He knew the Good Lord is faithful, and the cornerstone of truth and knowledge is to trust in the Lord. Christ Jesus his Savior has taken home His good and faithful servant.

Al is survived by his loving wife, Cherita; they were married for 40 years. From a previous marriage, Cherita had a daughter Cory (Smith) Russell (husband Bill, son Jason, daughter Oliva and son-in-law Justin, stepson Ryan), who also resides in Oak Harbor. Al was previously married to Janette (van Slageren) Ellis, who preceded him in death in 2017, with whom he had two children: Alana Morris of Seattle (daughter Antje and son Isak), and Randy Koetje of Woodinville (wife Yan, son Timothy, stepson and daughter-in-law Daniel and Brittany Kirk, grandchildren Isla and Arlo and stepson Sean Hu). Al is also survived by his sisters: Burleigh Smith (husband Garry) and Kathy Bos (husband Stan); and brother Jim Koetje (wife Balisa); and also numerous cousins, nephews and nieces. His family loved him very much and always enjoyed spending time with him at the beach cabin on West Beach. Al was preceded in death by his parents, brothers Henry and Lester, and sister Louise.

The family also wishes to express its deepest gratitude to Dr. Douglas Langrock, Hospice of the Northwest and Skagit Valley Hospital for the wonderful and exemplary care and comfort they provided for Al and the family through this difficult time.

A memorial service for Al will be held at First Reformed Church of Oak Harbor Thursday, Nov. 21, at 2:30 p.m., with a reception to follow. Pastor Matt Waite and Chaplain David G. Lura, USN (Ret.) will be co-officiating. Al will be laid to rest at Maple Leaf Cemetery.
