Whidbey Playhouse invites you to go "Barefoot"

By Kathy Reed Whidbey Weekly

Theater lovers of all ages will enjoy the latest production offered by Whidbey Playhouse in Oak Harbor. The Neil Simon classic, "Barefoot in the Park," opens Friday at the community theater and will run through Sunday, Feb. 19.

The Playhouse production is directed by Dave Frazer, with Connor Magnoli and Karina Andrew playing Paul and Corie Bratter, Shaelyn Christie plays Corie's mother, Ethel Banks, and Steve DeHaven plays the colorful upstairs neighbor, Victor Velasco. Chris Kehoe, as telephone repairman Harry Pepper, and Lachlan Waterbury as the delivery man, round out the small cast.

The romantic comedy was Simon's longest-running Broadway hit, premiering in 1963. (It was made into a film in 1967, starring Robert Redford and Jane Fonda.) The story centers on newlyweds Paul and Corie. Paul is a lawyer just beginning his career. Corie is more of a free spirit, who has selected the couple's first apartment, a small space on the fifth floor of a New York brownstone – the sixth floor if one counts the steps of the stoop, which most folks do.

The Playhouse production has stayed true to the original time period, which is a fun throwback for those old enough to remember the 60s and a quirky, somewhat old-fashioned time for those of younger generations. But, as with most Neil Simon works, the emphasis isn't on the time period – it's on the characters and their relationships.

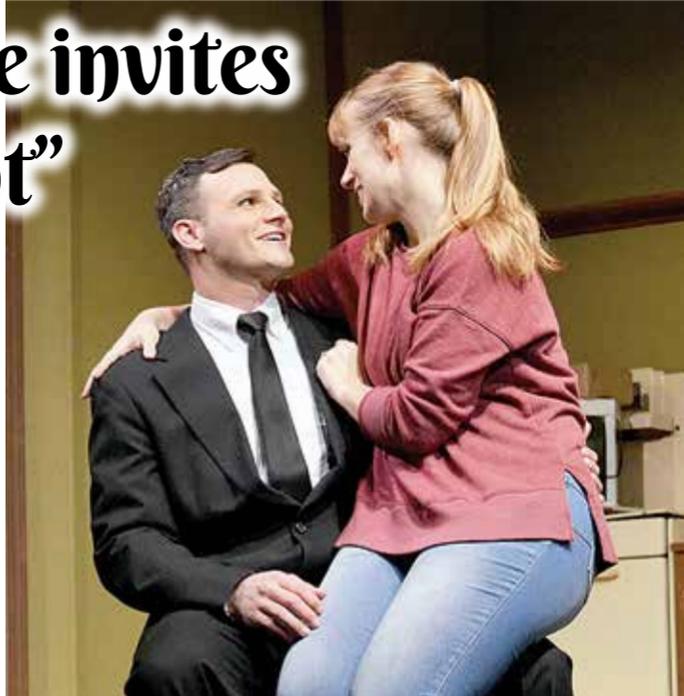

"Neil Simon plays are filled with zany characters who approach everyday issues with unintentional comedic flair," said Frazer. "Like most plays, conflict allows for development of character and Corie and Paul are presented as personality opposites. She approaches life full of fun and adventure, while Paul only sees what's wrong with the apartment. He thinks she is too frivolous, while she thinks he is a stick-in-the-mud who doesn't know how to have fun."

The play is well cast and the actors – who have an extreme amount of dialog to remember – do an excellent job of making their characters believable and real. One can feel the exuberance and excitement of a young couple in love, just settling into their first home, and one can easily read the signs of frustration as the two begin quickly learning about the realities of marriage.

Frazer said the actors do a great job of making the emotions "big."

"Simon writes juxtapositions of emotions into 'Barefoot' that we have tried to exploit to the fullest," he explained. "This is developed most evidently in Act 2 Scene 2, when Paul and Corie are having the fight. One of them is always ramped up while the other is much calmer. Simon flip flops these emotions so that they are rarely on the same emotional level."

"Corie is optimistic and spontaneous, as well as a chronic people pleaser, who feels all her feelings in a big way," said Andrew of her character. "All of this sometimes works to her benefit — like helping her to see the best in her disaster of an apartment — but sometimes it causes her to steam-roll right over other people's needs and feelings.

"It would be easy for Corie to come across as a silly girl who just needs to grow up, but as I've considered Corie's arc as a whole, I've tried to portray her for who I think she is — a resourceful and determined woman who grows to recognize and appreciate the depth and validity of others' feelings, even when they're different from her own," she continued.

"Paul is a lawyer fresh out of law school and just starting his first days at his new law firm in New York," Magnoli described. "He is young, ambitious, and is trying to have that proper and conservative attitude that he believes all lawyers should have.

"Funnily enough, according to my [in real life] wife, I do not need to do much 'acting' for this character," he continued. "I naturally like order and routine in my day-to-day life and tend to get flustered when the plan goes inevitably awry. So as the rehearsals have progressed, I have worked really hard on bringing out Paul's frustration and exasperation with the world when it does not go exactly as he planned."

DeHaven, who is making his first appearance on the Whidbey Playhouse stage, said he thought he could have some fun with his character.

"Victor Velasco starts out as something of a freewheeling vagabond," he said. "By the end of the play, though, he may have found a reason to settle down to a quieter lifestyle. I think early on in rehearsals, I saw him as having the same carefree attitude about everyone and everything, but as I've progressed along with the rest of the cast, I've found that he has quite different relationships with all three of the main characters."

Christie, who in real life is a mom to three young children, said that experience proved helpful when developing her character.

"Corie's mom, Ethel, is having a hard time letting go of her daughter, who's just gotten married," she described. "She talks about how she's now living alone, all the way out in New Jersey. She's having a hard time with the fact Corie has left, and now she has no one else at home. It's a hard adjustment. I don't even like to think of my kids growing up just yet because the thought of them leaving is hard. I felt that came in handy, especially when Ethel is comforting Corie."

While the play does have conflict of varying degrees between all the characters, cast and crew said it has been one of the most fun productions with which they've been involved.

"Each rehearsal brought many laughs as the actors developed their characters and became increasingly comfortable with working with each other," said Frazer. "As a director, I feel that I have been truly blessed to work with this group."

New OHHS club focuses on homelessness

By Kathy Reed Whidbey Weekly

A new club at Oak Harbor High School aims to put the fun in philanthropy.

"No Strangers – Wildcat Philanthropy" is a newly-formed group at the high school which plans to focus on helping the homeless in our community.

No Strangers is the brainchild of Calum Mannion and Connor Cash, both 16 and sophomores at OHHS. The two have known each other since 2011, when they met playing baseball for the Little League team, the Mudcats. The young men, who answered questions emailed to them by Whidbey Weekly jointly, are still involved in athletics, including varsity football, baseball, basketball, swimming and tennis, and say they are so far enjoying a "typical" high school experience, "hanging out with friends, blasting music, skiing and more."

Their good sportsmanship and apparent team-building strengths have now taken them in a direction that may not be at all typical for

PACCAR Donates Engine to Skagit Valley College's Diesel Power Technology Program

PACCAR, a global leader in the design, manufacture, and customer support of light-, medium-, and heavy-duty trucks, has donated a diesel engine designed and built by the company to Skagit Valley College's diesel technology program.

The engine will provide countless hands-on learning opportunities for SVC students and provide an opportunity to learn on some of the newest technology in the industry.

The relationship between PACCAR and SVC goes back decades beginning with Jack Whiting, who established the college's diesel power technology program with the goal of turning out competent diesel engine technicians.

"In addition to engine donations, PACCAR's technical team spends time with students, sharing insights not only on technical issues, but also on career opportunities and the future of diesel technology," said Andringa.

In return for its support of the program, PACCAR has benefited from access to the next generation of diesel expertise.

"Over the past several years, more than 20 graduates from our program have ended up working for PACCAR," Andringa said.

Andringa also noted demand for skilled diesel technicians is particularly strong.

"The industry has been taking whatever we can supply, and a lot of our students are already employed," said Andringa. "They go to school in the morning and to work in the afternoon."

Headquartered in Bellevue, Wash., PACCAR also has a technical center in Burlington, where they develop and test new technologies. The company and its employees' charitable contributions demonstrate a strong commitment to the communities in which they work and live. The PACCAR Foundation grants millions of dollars each year for education, social services and the arts.

To learn more about the PACCAR diesel engine donation, contact Brad Tuininga at the Skagit Valley College Foundation, at brad.tuininga@skagit.edu.

Whidbey Community Foundation's 2023-2025 Strategic Plan

Whidbey Community Foundation (WCF) envisions a vibrant, healthy and unified Whidbey Island. Its mission is to improve the quality of life on Whidbey by: providing support for the nonprofit sector, assisting donors to build and preserve enduring assets for charitable purposes, and meeting community needs through financial awards.

In the second half of 2022, the WCF board and staff came together to reflect on this purpose and look ahead to how they will achieve their vision. They are pleased to present their 2023-2025 Strategic Plan, which includes strengthening nonprofits, increasing grant-making impact, and reaching donors with more options to leverage their philanthropic interests. For instance, they plan to increase their annual grant cycle from $125,000 to $150,000 in 2023 and are thrilled to bring Dolly Parton's Imagination Library to Whidbey Island this year.

WCF started in 2016 with just $20,000. Today it stewards over $3 million across 28 different funds. And that's not counting all of the distributions that have already gone back out into the community – in just six short years WCF has given over $1.5 million in grants to local organizations. With a vision that by 2036, on its 20th anniversary, WCF will have disbursed at least $5 million in grants to nonprofits and manage community assets of at least $20 million across multiple funds all dedicated to causes important to this island.

WCF values equity, trustworthiness, leadership and partnership – all components that are critical to a resilient Whidbey Island for all who call it home, now and into the future. WCF looks forward to hearing from the community about how those goals can be achieved together. And they look forward to sharing its progress as WCF lives its values, implements its plan, and connects people who care to causes that matter. WCF believes great things happen for the community when it comes together for the common good.

Please enjoy reviewing Whidbey Community Foundation's 2023-2025 Strategic Plan and 2021-2022 Impact Report, along with more information about ways to give and where to give at www.whidbeyfoundation.org.

Can you reduce the Medicare surcharge?

Before you turn 65, you'll want to become familiar with Medicare's rules and features. And if you're a high earner, you'll want to be especially aware of the Medicare premium surcharge — because, over time, it can add up to some significant dollars.

The premium surcharge — known as the income related monthly adjustment amount, or IRMAA — is assessed on premiums for Medicare Parts B and D, and generally is based on an individual's modified adjusted gross income (MAGI) of two years ago. So, the IRMAA for 2023 would be based on one's MAGI from 2021.

For someone who's married and files taxes jointly, and whose MAGI for 2021 was $194,000 or less, the Part B premium for 2023 will be $164.90 per month, and the Part D premium will be whatever amount is charged by their Medicare plan. But if their 2021 MAGI was between $194,000 and $246,000, they'll pay $230.80 (a surcharge of $65.90) for Part B and an additional $12.20 for Part D. And the IRMAA rises at different income levels, reaching a maximum of $560.50 (a surcharge of $395.60) for Part B and an additional $76.40 for Part D for a MAGI of $750,000 or more.

If you're unprepared for the IRMAA, it can be an unpleasant surprise. So, if you've still got a few years until you enroll in Medicare, you may want to look for ways to control your MAGI and possibly limit the surcharge.

Here are a few suggestions:

- Contribute to a Health Savings Account (HSA). If you have access to a Health Savings Account (HSA), your contributions will reduce your taxable income, helping you on the IRMAA issue. Furthermore, any investment growth within your HSA is tax free, as are withdrawals for qualified medical expenses, which can include Medicare premiums, deductibles and copays.

- Contribute to a Roth IRA. Roth IRA withdrawals are tax free, provided you don't start taking them until you're 59½ and you've had your account at least five years. These tax-free withdrawals can enable you to avoid taking taxable withdrawals from other accounts, which may help you avoid an increase in your IRMAA.

- Consider a Roth IRA conversion. You could convert some, or perhaps all, the assets of a traditional IRA into a Roth IRA. But you'll need to consider the impact of taxes — any deductible contributions to your traditional IRA and the earnings generated by these contributions will be fully taxable the year of the conversion, so you'll want to have funds outside your IRA available to pay these taxes. Also, timing is important — to be on the safe side, you might want to complete the Roth conversion three or more years before you enroll in Medicare, so the conversion and the likely increase in your MAGI won't increase the IRMAA.

- Manage your withdrawal rate — Taking large withdrawals from your retirement accounts can bump up your MAGI bracket and your IRMAA. So, as you near retirement, you'll want to establish a sustainable withdrawal rate — one that provides you the income you need but without going overboard.

While these moves could potentially help you control the Medicare surcharge, they still must make sense for your overall financial strategy. It's obviously desirable to keep the surcharge as low as you can — but it's even more important to take the steps necessary to reach your financial goals.

SHARP HOOKS!

In many of my columns, I have touched on the importance of good quality fishing line and you have heard me say, "good line is rarely cheap and cheap line is rarely good." There is another, equally as important piece of terminal tackle that we anglers rely on, and that is our hooks.

I grew up using the old standby "Eagle Claw" snelled hooks for most everything we fished for in the waters of Idaho – catfish, perch, bass, bluegill, trout, and walleye. I still use a lot of Eagle Claw hooks in the local freshwater lakes or if I'm targeting pile perch or red-tailed surf perch. Eagle Claws are affordable, pre-rigged with a short piece of monofilament leader with a loop in the end, and stay hooked well. However, after fishing in saltwater for bigger, stronger fish, it gave me a new appreciation for reliable, sharp and strong hooks. One of the biggest differences is the size of hooks used in the salt, 1/0 up to 9/0 size hooks are common when fishing for salmon, greenling, lingcod, or halibut. With the increase in hook size the cost also increases, so where I would normally just replace dull hooks with new ones, I now find it cost effective to sharpen them and keep the larger hooks in service as long as possible; especially when the large hooks are molded into a 4- to 10-ounce lead-head jig.

Another thing to consider is once you get good at sharpening hooks, it can actually take less time to sharpen the hook than it does to replace it. I fish a lot of Gamakatsu-brand hooks when I'm casting from the beaches for coho or pink salmon. Fresh out of the package I find these hooks to be very sharp, light weight, thin, but strong, and will hold an edge/point if touched-up with a file. There is discussion on which style of point penetrates the hard, boney mouths of fish better, a completely rounded point or a wedge style point. In my opinion, really big hooks (10/0 or larger) that are commonly used for halibut and huge lingcod, the wedge/diamond shape works well. I feel after the point makes the initial puncture, the sharp edges directly behind the point finish the job by cutting their way through the lip or cheek, completing the hook set. Sharp hooks quickly become dull when bounced off rocks, barnacles or broken-up shell beds; even simple saltwater can dull the factory edge over time.

Now that we know dull hooks are inevitable, how do we keep them sharp? It's not as simple as taking the hooks to the garage and hitting them on the bench grinder stone. We can ruin a good hook pretty fast by getting too aggressive. Making sharp hook points is a skill that comes with time and practice. If you are used to sharpening your fillet knife or knives in general, you're on your way because you know what the file feels like when it's moving along the steel. Any steel hook can be sharpened. Many of today's hooks are made sharp by a chemical process, giving hooks that symmetrically round look and making them "needle point" sharp. We may not be able to maintain the very same round needle point with a file, but we should be able to get it back to the point where it will easily bite into the flesh and cartilage of the fish's mouth.

SHARPENING THE HOOK: Don't worry if you don't have a custom hook file or an electric hook sharpener. Head to the hardware store and select a small to medium (3/4-inch to 1-inch wide), medium grain file. It will work just fine on most hooks. I like to think of a diamond shape when sharpening my hooks; we will be sliding our file along four sides of the hook to achieve sharpness, and if needed, one stroke to remove any small burrs raised by the file. Which direction do I push the file? If the shank and eye end of the hook will give me room, I sharpen the point by sliding the file from the point towards the bend. This keeps any micro burrs that might be created by the filing action facing the direction of least resistance when the hook is penetrating the tough mouth. Sometimes there simply isn't enough clearance to get the file sliding from the "point-to-bend" direction; don't worry, just start the file stroke from "bend-to-point." Either way, you are going to make the point sharper than before. At what angle do I hold the file? Whether you are holding the hook and moving the file or holding the file and moving the hook, try to keep the gap between the file surface and the hook point flat, only slightly elevated, no more than 10 degrees. You want to end up with a long needle-like point, not a short point like a center punch. You may find that some steel used to make the hook is softer than others. With harder steel, the file seems to skate on the hook instead of a grab and cut feeling. If the steel is extremely hard, then a whetstone or diamond infused stone may be required. Just use the same sharpening strokes as the file. Practice on a few old hooks for a while, get used to the feel of sharpening, and observe the changes in the hook's point shape. How do I know the point is sharp? Try the "fingernail test" after sharpening. Press down lightly and slowly drag the hook point down your fingernail. When you have it right, the point will feel sticky and dig into your fingernail. I know salmon fishermen that give hooks the fingernail test right out of the package. There will be times when hook replacement is best, but knowing how to file out a bent hook tip or touch up a slightly dull hook can save you both time and money.

Keep a close eye on the Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife (WDFW) website under the "Catchable trout plant reports;" this is where you will find lakes that are getting stocked with rainbow and steelhead trout. THINK SPRING!

This is a typical hook point we can keep sharp.

"I think we've all found it entertaining and funny," Christie said. "When Corie and Paul are fighting there are some angry, passionate moments. It's funny at the same time as it's being a pivotal point in their relationship."

"I hope audiences laugh as much during the performances as we did during the rehearsals," Andrew said. "The show, and my fellow cast members, are hilarious—there are so many lines I can barely get through without laughing. If audience members pay close attention, I bet they'll notice me trying not to smile in a few places!"

"I like the scene where my character meets Corie," DeHaven said. "There's some fun tension there, and of course some humorous release of that tension. I also like my final scene, where I get to interact more seriously with Corie's mother Ethel. But really, I like all the scenes my character is in, because he's the one who's having the most fun for most of the time he's on stage."

Tickets to "Barefoot in the Park" are $25. Performances are Fridays and Saturdays at 7:30 p.m. with matinees on Sundays at 2:30 p.m. through Feb. 19. An additional matinee performance will be offered Saturday, Feb. 11. Go to whidbeyplayhouse.com for information and to purchase tickets.

"All relationships, whether marital or friendship, usually have some conflict involved," Frazer said. "Simon's characters are just normal people who may take conflict to higher heights than most of us, and yet if you look closely, you might just see a bit of yourself in those characters on stage."

"I hope audiences enjoy what Neil Simon was all about – fast, zippy humor during times of emotional conflict," Magnoli said. "I can't tell you how hard it is to be furious while trying not to laugh hysterically on stage. Luckily all the audience has to do is sit back and enjoy!"

Corie (Karina Andrew) and Paul (Connor Magnoli) get under each other's skin as they try to navigate a new marriage in the Neil Simon play "Barefoot in the Park." The show opens Friday and runs through Feb. 19 at Whidbey Playhouse in Oak Harbor.

high schoolers. The two have collaborated to put together a team of their peers interested in making a real difference in their community. No Stranger's focus on homelessness was spurred on by questions to which they hope to find answers.

"Homelessness is evident everywhere, it seems," Mannion and Cash said. "Our parks, the woods, behind our businesses, especially driving into Seattle and seeing all the tents, trash, etc. How did this happen? Why? Is it the high cost of living or mental health? Post-pandemic consequence or illicit drugs? Poverty and domestic violence or the lack of affordable housing? We don't know these answers either, but we want to do our best to make a positive difference."

The two said compassion and service are two key factors that contribute to what No Strangers is all about.

"The vision of No Strangers will be to give compassionate, motivated students the opportunity to explore and tackle this problem hands on, by networking for resources, collaborating with professionals, and helping to participate in a meaningful community service activity," they said.

Both young men said they are following examples set by their families.

"My grandparents are well known in central Florida for their food ministry and dedicated work for the homeless," said Mannion. "This trait seems to have been passed on to me. One example I can share is that while on vacation with my parents in Nepal, I independently handed out school supplies and lollipops to the needy children near Kathmandu."

"I have always wanted to make a difference within our community and after hearing about the climbing rates of homeless deaths in the Pacific Northwest and being surrounded by people without a roof over their head, Calum and I have decided that this is how we want to leave our mark," Cash said.

The young men said they have the support of leaders within the OHHS class of 2025, which they hope will translate into new members who can make a positive impact in more ways than one.

"Our high school students are a fantastic resource for local businesses, governments, and the faith community to partner with, so the students can learn early on how to solve active problems best, by actually working on them, outside the classroom," they said. "No Strangers will hopefully show the capacity, potential, and youthful energy to be freshly creative, utilize modern technology skills, and exercise learned leadership skills, and to be empowered to utilize these skills to tackle actual problems in our community. These lessons learned will contribute to all areas of the students' lives both during and after high school."

The two are looking beyond just getting No Strangers started. They said they hope the group will establish some "best practice" policies that can be passed on to future group members and high school leaders.

Calum Mannion and Connor Cash, sophomores at Oak Harbor High School, have started a new club called No Strangers-Wildcat Philanthropy, which seeks to do its part to help the homeless in our community.

There is also a GoFundMe page, as Mannion and Cash said they don't want a lack of resources to keep them from "doing good." As of Monday, they had raised just over half of their $1,000 goal.

"We recently started a GoFundMe fund charity fundraiser to rally initial support and encourage more people to give," Mannion and Cash said. "Even a $5 dollar donation can make an impactful difference."

"We also have recently partnered with Ryan's House for Youth, well known on our island for their assistance and outreach to young adults experiencing homelessness," they continued. "We donated homemade ham and cheese sandwiches, fruit, bottled water and hand warmers to begin our club's journey."

The club is now actively seeking other like-minded students to join Mannion and Cash in "doing good things."

"Together, we will look for better answers," they said. "[We] realize we are not perfect, but privileged, and unafraid to fail; that we are a team of individuals with a shared experience to help our community. Together, we will gain better insight, better uncover our individual leadership potential, and perhaps discover a new passion we didn't know we had! Together, we will create a working atmosphere that is respectful to differences, encourages everyone's voice, supports teamwork and progress, and we will always be good stewards to the generosity of resources and trust donated by our community."

Anyone interested in learning more or supporting No Strangers-Wildcat Philanthropy can contact Mannion at 360-499-4793 or Cash at 360-632-9601. WEEKLY HOROSCOPES

ARIES – Mar 21/Apr 20

Aries, it's important to focus on progress and not necessarily on money that can be made. See what you can learn along the path you choose.

TAURUS – Apr 21/May 21

You have high hopes that your efforts will be well received this week, Taurus. Before you move full speed ahead, run your ideas by a trusted group of confidantes.

GEMINI – May 22/June 21

You don't learn by getting things right all of the time, Gemini. A few mistakes along the way provide an opportunity to grow and figure out new ways to do the job.

CANCER – Jun 22/Jul 22

Cancer, distractions seemingly abound this week and your head isn't in the game. While you can get away with a few oversights here and there, too many can be problematic.

LEO – Jul 23/Aug 23

Leo, someone in your life is looking for a pep talk and you are just the person to provide one. Listen to the problem at hand and offer this person some solid solutions.

VIRGO – Aug 24/Sept 22

Virgo, you could be at a crossroads in your life. You are pondering many different scenarios, and now is the time to solidify plans for the next few weeks.

LIBRA – Sept 23/Oct 23

If you made a career change recently, you may be discovering that the payoff isn't quite what you expected. Fulfillment is essential, so give some thought to new pursuits.

SCORPIO – Oct 24/Nov 22

Scorpio, it is not like you to feel adrift, but that could be the situation right now. Latch on to one activity or person that brings you joy. Focus on the positives in life.

SAGITTARIUS – Nov 23/Dec 21

Sagittarius, family members want to spend more time with you, so plan for the extra company. Have a few extra snacks on hand and make sure the house is orderly.

CAPRICORN – Dec 22/Jan 20

Your tendency to want to tackle things all on your own could have you pushing others away, Capricorn. Accept others' willingness to pitch in.

AQUARIUS – Jan 21/Feb 18

Aquarius, there has been a lot on your plate and many thoughts swimming through your mind. A quick getaway could be what is needed this month.

PISCES – Feb 19/Mar 20

Pisces, you have a few offers on the table, but could be having trouble narrowing down your preference. Bring in a third party to help.

OUR Community

An Upbeat Question of the week

By Helen Mosbrooker

If you were put in the witness protection program, what identity would you assume?

Timothy Hickey, Oak Harbor

If I were put in the witness protection program, I'd like to be about 45 years younger, a lot smarter, and live on Whidbey Island. Oh, that's not how it works? Okay then, I'd like to take on the identity of a retired rodeo rider who came out on top at the Pendleton Roundup one year. That would provide rich grounds for storytelling.

Jamie Anderson, Freeland

If I were to enter the witness protection program, I would take the identity of an artist. I have always wanted to paint and this would give me a good reason to start something new. I would use my art as expression and hold painting classes for all genders and ages! The world needs more right brained people - I would help people tap into their creative side.

Rick Colombo, Oak Harbor

This situation is not a dream come true. The world situation as it is, guessing I might fall victim to just being in the wrong place at the wrong time, seeing something that would cause me to be put in harm's way. The Witness Protection Program would uproot everything one holds dear. I imagine it would push me into trying to be that which I am not, maybe a bald, crotchety old curmudgeon living in some hidden away trailer park with my fishin' pole and bucket of worms.

Hoping soon that the perpetrator would earn his/her just rewards and I could return to normal, enjoying my head of hair, living in my own home, and having my friends over for a fish fry.

Adam McCann, Oak Harbor

If I were to go into the witness protection program, I would want to go to Maine. Once there, I would buy a boat for catching and selling fresh local lobster and crab!

VOLUNTEER OPPORTUNITIES

Island Shakespeare Festival is seeking new members to join our board of directors. We're looking for people who are passionate about high-quality live classical theater and can devote time and energy to support the work of Island Shakespeare Festival's important cultural, social, and fiscal position on Whidbey Island. Our current needs include individuals with backgrounds in the following areas: human resources, donor relations, finance, as well as other skills related to overseeing a performing arts organization. Board members are asked to provide input and feedback to the Board and staff of ISF, attend one full board meeting per month, serve actively on board committees, and attend activities and events sponsored by ISF. Women and persons of color strongly encouraged to apply. For more information, please contact jeff.natter@island-shakespearefest.org.

Big Brothers Big Sisters of Island County (BBBSIC) is actively seeking new member(s) for its board of directors. Join the board's exciting array of professionals! BBBSIC is seeking individuals who are committed to defending the potential of youth in our community through their time, skill sets, and influence in the community. To complement the existing board, candidates with expertise in accounting, law, nonprofit management, networking, or fundraising are of particular interest. Committed to diversifying its board to better represent our community, BBBSIC encourages BIPOC and LGBTQIA community members to inquire. Please contact admin@bbbsislandcounty.org for more information.

The Island County Medical Reserve Corps (ICMRC) is a local network of volunteers organized to improve the health and safety of communities on Whidbey and Camano Islands. Volunteers primarily include medical and public health professionals but other volunteers who have no healthcare backgrounds are also utilized. MRC responds to local emergencies such as natural disasters and public health emergencies. If you are interested in volunteering please contact us at Island County MRC website for application and information.

If you are looking for a meaningful volunteer opportunity, look no further! When you volunteer at one of the Habitat for Humanity of Island County stores, you are helping local families attain decent, affordable housing. Income from the stores is vital to giving families a path to homeownership. We need people who can commit to help out in our Oak Harbor or Freeland store at least two-hours per week. Schedules are flexible. Our friendly volunteers provide customer service, help with receiving donated household items and furniture, and maintain the store. We also need drivers and driver helpers who will professionally represent Habitat as they pick up donated items using our trucks. Please call either store for more information. Oak Harbor: 360-675-8733, Freeland: 360-331-6272.

Whidbey Watershed Stewards seeks an enthusiastic individual to serve as our EDUCATION COORDINATOR. The education coordinator leads the operation, development and promotion of the environmental education program for Whidbey Watershed Stewards. The education coordinator is responsible for creating and teaching a curriculum that is supportive of the mission, goals and objectives of Whidbey Watershed Stewards. Whidbey Watershed Stewards is a nonprofit 501(c)3 organization located on south Whidbey Island. We work with the Island County community to promote environmental stewardship, habitat enhancement, and natural science based environmental education for all ages. We seek to inform and engage people to be a catalyst for positive actions in order to ensure the vitality of our land, watersheds, and nearshore for the people and environment of Puget Sound. One of our primary activities is to provide spring and fall outdoor education sessions at the Rene Neff (a.k.a. Max-welton) Outdoor Classroom to K-5 classes from the South Whidbey School District and other nearby schools. Lessons focus on hands-on, natural science activities and are taught by volunteer instructors and the education coordinator. The job type is part time/seasonal based on the school year and three weeks of summer day camp. Approximately 850 hours per year. Hourly rate is $22 to $25 depending on applicant's experience.

Interested candidates should review the position's job description on the WWS website: www.whidbeywatersheds.org - and submit a resume, cover letter and three references to whidbeywatersheds@gmail.com with subject line Education Coordinator Search. Candidates must also be able to pass a full police clearance with background check and provide proof of COVID vaccinations. For further information, please call Marie Bergstrom at 253-298-1362. The position will remain open until filled. It is anticipated the person selected will begin work ASAP and preferably no later than March 1. (3)
