LOCALLY OWNED & OPERATED

AUGUST 10 - AUGUST 16, 2023

By Kathy Reed Whidbey Weekly

Those of us who live here know there is nothing finer than Whidbey Island on a summer day, unless perhaps you add one of the longest-running arts and crafts events to the mix.

The 59th annual Coupeville Arts and Crafts Festival is happening this weekend from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday. With items ranging from ceramics to soap, glass to garden art, fiber arts to fine art, organizers with the Coupeville Festival Association have put together an event sure to please.

"This year we have more vendors than we've ever had," shared Sami Postma, CFA board member. "We're squeezing them in everywhere we can, with currently a total of 142 artisan vendors and seven food vendors. We have a mix of roughly 30 percent new vendors, 40 percent returning vendors, and 30 percent are vendors who have been with us for more than five years. A couple of the vendors have been with us for more than 30 years."

Now back to pre-pandemic levels, the Coupeville Arts and Crafts Festival has actually taken some of the lessons learned over the past couple of years to make the festival-going experience even better for the thousands of people expected to attend the event.

"People loved the spacing we added due to pandemic precautions, so we're definitely keeping that going forward," Postma said. "We don't have any more than two booths next to each other before there's a gap. We found this makes for a happier, more pleasant experience for both the vendors and the participants. When you're walking down the busy street and want to stop and peruse, there's plenty more space to step to the side or into the booth to take a longer look without having to feel like you're taking up all of their 10-foot space. You don't feel as rushed and can take it more at your own pace."

For those attendees who have worked up an appetite browsing through the dozens of different offerings, Postma said between the town's many restaurants and the festival's food court, there will be plenty of dining options to

"An event of this size just brings too many people in and overwhelms the businesses, so we bring in additional options to the food court to help ease some of that pressure, bring some more variety to town, and help keep things running smooth and quick so everyone can get what they need without falling prey to the 'hangry,'" she explained. "I'm very excited about this year's food options; not only do we have classic favorites like lumpia, African food, corndogs, and ice cream, but we have a few new food vendors that are bringing some of my fair food favorites like smoked sandwiches and crepes."

It's a big undertaking to put on an event of this size every year, and the Arts and Crafts Festival is a great example of how volunteer efforts and community partnerships can pay off.

"Coupeville Festival Association is an all-volunteer group – we literally could not have this event without volunteers," said Postma. "Volunteers are crucial to helping make sure the festival stays safe, welcoming, and open to all.. It's also a great way to keep our youth involved; the last couple of years we've had awesome turnout from the Cheer squad to help as festival greeters when people arrive, and the Scouts who help collect the garbage and keep the whole festival clean.

"It's a beautiful town that comes together to put on a great festival," she continued. "We've always had special emphasis on taking care of our vendors and our volunteers, and they in turn are able to pass on those good vibes to the people coming to explore their art and make some purchases. Many people report that this is their favorite event because of how well-organized it is and how helpful and friendly every person is that they come across. Plus, who could pass up that view?"

Postma said volunteers are always needed, and it may not be too late to lend a hand this year for those who may be interested in helping. (An up-to-date list of volunteer needs is posted at coupevillefestival.com/volunteer.)

While the CFA relies on volunteers to make the festival happen, the organization shows its appreciation by giving back to the community.

"Some of the money [raised through the festival] is held in reserve to put on next year's festival, but otherwise the profits go into our community grant program and our scholarship program," explained Postma. "We offer four $2,000 scholarships each year to festival volunteers, and in 2022 alone, we were able to offer

Big Festival and Small Community Host Multi-Day Outdoor Music Festival at Whidbey Island Fairgrounds

Little Big Fest is on its way to becoming the biggest little festival on south Whidbey Island. This two-day, family-friendly event takes place in the field, midway and buildings at the Whidbey Island Fairgrounds in Langley, Wash.

More than 20 bands from Portland, Seattle and Whidbey are scheduled to rotate on and off two stages. The gates open at 3:00рм Friday, music begins at 4:00рм and ends at 11:30pm. The venue opens at 10:00Aм both Saturday and Sunday. The first band starts at noon both days and ends at 11:30рм Saturday and 11:00рм Sunday. Festival goers will be able to enjoy beer gardens featuring local beer, wine and cider; art, retail and food vendors; a family zone; a healing zone; yoga and a silent disco.

The focus of Little Big Fest is not only to support live music, but also music education and local artists. Profits from ticket sales will pay musicians and bands and go toward music education scholarships for local high school students.

Little Big Fest is the brainchild of local musician Keegan Harshman, a 2010 graduate of South Whidbey High School. Harshman ventured away for a few years after high school, traveling and playing in various bands at gigs and festivals in San Luis Obispo, Calif., before returning home to raise his own family.

"I played with an amazing community of musicians while living in California. When I moved back to Whidbey Island, I missed a part of that culture, atmosphere and camaraderie, and thought instead of searching for it, why don't I try to help bring a taste to this awesome community on Whidbey," said Harshman. "It's my spark, and with the help of the community, it's a fire that can Harshman grew up attending the annual Choochokam Music and Arts Festival that attracted thousands of people to Langley every July for 41 years. Choochokam ended in 2015. Harshman's vision is to provide a new festival that honors the passion and professionalism of musicians and inspires youngsters.

"It's not just a music festival," Harshman said. "It's a gift to the community that can grow. Seeing people play their hearts out on stage is inspiring to people of all ages.

"This year, I've got a great team of helpers and we're using two stages and setting up different areas of use throughout the fairgrounds."

Bands won't be competing for ears on the stages. The line-up allows each band to play between 45 minutes to two hours of music on one stage while the next act sets up on the other stage, said Harshman, who plays bass guitar and owns Blue Sound Music in Langley.

He'll be playing in several of the bands: Nathaniel Talbot, Janie Cribbs and the T. Rust Band, and his most recent project, Doctor Savage.

Portland's Outer Orbit is Friday night's headliner and features an eight-piece band playing original soul and funk while drawing on a range of influences from Sly

Stone and The Meters to Aretha Franklin. Saturday's headliner is Seattle's F2D (Funky2Death). They're a six-piece band of local funk scene pioneers who enjoy influences such as Sly Stone, James Brown, Graham Central Station and Chaka Kahn.

Closing Little Big Fest Sunday evening is Portland's Scott Pemberton O Theory. Scott Pemberton's sound is much like the vibe of his native Portland: fun! The best way to categorize his music is with the moniker "timber rock." Scott naturally applies his own lens/stamp to the sounds of the Pacific Northwest, the region he has always called home: deep jazz, PNW rock/grunge, blues roots and west coast funk. The mastery of his guitar playing, combined with his songwriting, Scott plays with the uninhibited joy and intensity of someone who recognizes that every time we make music is an honor and a gift.

Tickets and camping passes are available now on the website, littlebigfest.org, including day and weekend passes with or without camping. Camping options include passes for tent camping, car camping and RV at the fairgrounds.

Little Big Fest is supported by local and Seattle-area sponsors and is open to more sponsorship. Contact Keegan Harshman for details at keegan@bluesoundmusic.

City Addresses Community Interest in Future Sonic Drive-In and Glint Car Wash Projects

USAF Sierra Winds to blow into Langley

By Kathy Reed Whidbey Weekly

Sierra Winds, an ensemble group of the U.S. Air Force Band of the Golden West from Travis Air Force Base in California, will present an afternoon of music by American composers at 3 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 20 at Island Church in Langley, 503 Cascade Ave. Advance tickets to this free, family-friendly event can be reserved online at www.eventbrite. com/e/676196892107.

This ensemble group is one of many small groups from the Band of the Golden West which travel across the country performing at all kinds of events ranging from military ceremonies and patriotic shows to educational programs and recitals.

"Part of our mission is to connect with communities and have a military presence in places that would otherwise never see a uniformed member," said Staff Sgt. Alena Zidlicky, marketing representative and member of Sierra Winds. "There can be a lot of misconceptions toward the military, but we are regular people who have all raised our right hand to help protect this nation and civilians.'

Photo Courtesy of USAF Band of the Golden West Musicians with Sierra Winds are experienced performers. The group, part of the U.S. Air Force Band of the Golden West, performs all over the country at military and civilian events.

Zidlicky said Travis Air Force Base is part of Air Mobility Command, which carries out humanitarian missions around the globe.

"This includes evacuations in war zones and delivery of goods to war-stricken areas," she said in an email to Whidbey Weekly. "In order to do these missions, we need the support of civilian communities. That's where we come in! There is also a need for young people to enlist and many don't know what life is like in the military and how it can benefit them and their families. We are trying to bring all of these messages to the Langley community through the power of music."

Meeting members of the audiences the group plays for is one of Zidlicky's favorite things about being part of Sierra Winds.

"We are unique in that we talk to audience members after performances," she said. "In the orchestras that I've been in, I have not been able to talk to the audience and really get to hear their stories or how the music impacts them. In this way, we are so much more accessible to people."

Zidlicky said she loves meeting veterans and hearing their stories and she also loves bringing high quality music performance to people who might not otherwise get to hear it.

"Our shows are free, so students and others who otherwise couldn't afford to attend symphony shows can come and see musicians who have come from some of the top schools all over the nation," she said. "Many of us have played with world-class ensembles and through the Air Force, we are so accessible to the average person and love bringing world-class music/musicians to communities

Members of the Band of the Golden West, and therefore Sierra Winds, come from all over, Zidlicky said. It also means they can be deployed anywhere.

"We have been stationed all over the world, including Germany and the Middle East," she shared. "The commonality between all of us is that after we win a job with the USAF Regional Bands, we all go to Lackland AFB for basic military training like everyone in the U.S. Air Force. We can be stationed at any regional band at either five continental U.S. bases or four abroad bases, at Germany, Japan, Hawaii, or Belgium. As members of the Air Force, we have the opportunity to deploy as bandsmen or to go outside of our field. One question we often get asked is if this is our actual job in the military and IT IS! One part of our mission is to connect with our civilian communities [and] foster relationships in our five-state region."

Anyone who has lived on Whidbey Island for any length of time knows of the island's U.S. Navy presence through Naval Air Station Whidbey Island. Zidlicky said there is always friendly competition between the different military branches, so they are happy to represent the Air Force on Whidbey.

"We have playful banter between our different forces, but one thing is for sure, we absolutely need each other," she said. "I've also played for Marine, Navy, Army, Coast Guard and even Space Force ceremonies and we have several members who have backgrounds in the other military bands and have had other members who have gone on to win jobs with bands of different branches. It's more like sibling rivalry. At the end of the day, we all have our part in defending our nation."

While reservations are encouraged on Eventbrite so the group can track attendance, people are welcome to attend without a

"We have never turned people away from a concert and will find a seat for you," Zidlicky said. "Please tell and bring your friends! We also encourage children to come as well. Since it's only an hour, it shouldn't be too hard on them to sit through!"

The exceptional rating summarizes how quickly patients felt they received care after using the call button and general responsiveness regarding their care. "WhidbeyHealth focuses on connecting with each patient to make their stay with us as comfortable and accommodating as possible," commented Curtis Shumate, executive director of nursing. "Washington continues to be a leader in science, technology, engineering and mathematics (STEM) with more than 260,000 students enrolled in career and technical education statewide," said Larsen, whose office has participated in the CAC every year since its founding in 2013. "I have seen the creativity of students in classrooms across Northwest Washington firsthand and look forward to seeing that creativity shine through in this year's submissions.'

Students can sign up to participate and read the full competition rules at www. congressional appchallenge.us/students/. Students have until 9:00AM PST Wednesday, Nov. 1, to register and enter, but CAC organizers recommend students register early to receive extra support and tips Larsen will announce a district winner in December and invite the winner to the #HouseofCode Capitol Hill Reception in Washington D.C. at a date to be decided. Winning apps will be electronically displayed in the U.S. Capitol and on the CAC's house.gov website.

Last year, Azul Rangel and Sydney Vo from Mariner High School in Everett won the district's Congressional App Challenge with their WordToASL app.

History comes full circle at Island County museum

By Kathy Reed Whidbey Weekly

If one was to ask Vern Olsen, a well-known Whidbey Island resident (music teacher, founding member of the Shifty Sailors), what his most important accomplishment has been, he'd be the first to say, "My family."

He and his wife, Martha, have lived on Whidbey for 50 years and raised their two children here. Their eldest, daughter Adora Olsen Hoose, just celebrated her 50th birthday, and it's fair to say her gift was pretty "historic."

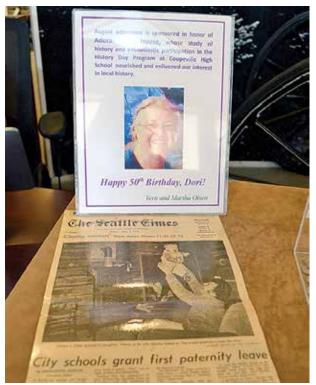

The Olsens, both of whom volunteer at the Island County Historical Museum in Coupeville, arranged for Hoose to be the museum's admission sponsor for the month of August, and surprised her with the news at a visit to the museum last weekend. (The program allows visitors to the museum to tour the facility without paying an admission fee. All visitors are welcome to make an additional donation if they choose.)

But there's a whole other layer to this story, and there is, appropriately enough, some history behind the gift.

As it turns out, Vern Olsen was something of a trailblazer 50 years ago. According to an April 5, 1974, article from The Seattle Times, Olsen was the first man in the Seattle School District to be granted paternity leave, but it was a battle to get it.

In the early 70s, Olsen was teaching at Kimball Elementary School. He said the school received a federal grant that allowed faculty to involve the community in what was taught at the

Kathy Reed/Whidbey Weekly

Vern and Martha Olsen have tied a bit of family history to the Island County Historical Museum in Coupeville and are honoring their daughter's birthday by making her the admission sponsor for August. Pictured from left are Martha, Vern. Adora Olsen Hoose, Toby Hoose and Shawn Hoose, the home for conferences. Parents were involved in what curriculum was taught. Parenting was something that was important because of the federal program, how it was important for both the mother and father to be involved. I wanted to have leave to be with my daughter."

According to The Seattle Times' article, when Olsen first applied for leave before his daughter was born, he was told he'd have to resign if he wanted to take a year off.

"There was a clause in the new teachers' contract that referred to 'child-caring leave.' It didn't say a woman had to do it," Olsen said. "That's the argument I gave to the school district. They came back with, 'We require that a mother, after giving birth, has to have a medical exam to show she's ready to come back, and you

Olsen filed a grievance and sexual discrimination charges against the district. He won the grievance and was granted leave six months after his daughter's birth. By that time, the couple had purchased property near Greenbank and they were working to fix up their log home.

"We had a lot of work to do, especially electricity and plumbing," he said, admitting his request wasn't just about equal treatment for men and women, even though he believed strongly in those issues. "It was a way for me to be at home with our child and also work on the house. It was a great year.

"It impacted our whole family process," Olsen continued. "We spent time together taking care of animals, teaching the kids food doesn't just come in bags from the store. We also did the same for my son, who we adopted. I didn't get to take a year off, but the Coupeville School District was starting an elementary music program and couldn't afford a full-time teacher, so that meant I could be at home half the time. So with both kids, I was able to be at home more than I thought I could be."

Hoose said she wholeheartedly agrees her dad did the right thing 50 years ago.

"I am so happy he was able to do that," she said. "I think it's so important. My husband didn't' get to do that as much. It would have been wonderful if he had been able to be home more. My dad got to be there and I sat on his knee all the time when I was really little and we did all kinds of things together that we never would have gotten to do if he'd been working at that point."

While Olsen doesn't think of himself as a trailblazer, he said he's often curious about how many men do take advantage of paternity leave. There is no federal paid leave program in place today, but Washington State did pass a family leave measure in 2017 that allows parents - men or women - to take time off for the arrival of a new child.

Mostly, though, Olsen recognizes the synergy in the history of his family's experience.

"Martha and I both feel good about our decisions back then." he said. "This is our golden wedding anniversary, this golden time. I haven't thought about it very often, but when all of a sudden Adora's 50, that's pretty special. To know something special happened back then, we should celebrate that."

A history buff, Hoose truly appreciates her parents' gift. She went to national competition for Coupeville High School's History Day, and went on to study history in college. Now she works at a university in California. She, too, feels the synergy.

"I think the history lesson is that 'You can do it," she said. "It is possible. Change is possible. Looking back 50 years we can say, 'Hey, here's what happened then. Let's push that to what can happen now.' It can change the way people think. It can change what people do. It allowed teachers in public schools to say, 'I want to take leave for my kid,' and they could. That's a big change. I always have pride in telling people, 'My dad was one of Potatoes are often the unsung heroes of meals. They work any time of the day and with most meals. Hash browns accompany eggs at breakfast, French fries are ideal with sandwiches come lunchtime, and there's no limiting potatoes at dinner. They can be the star of the show with potato gnocchi or baked potato soup, or serve as mashed or baked complements to roasts and more.

Steak and potatoes long has been a popular pairing that wins rave reviews around the table. This recipe for "Steak with Crispy Potatoes and Pistachio Pesto" from "Real Simple Dinner Tonight: Done" (Time Home Entertainment) by the editors of Real Simple highlights what a winning combination steak and potatoes can be.

STEAK WITH CRISPY POTATOES AND PISTACHIO PESTO (Serves 4)

1 1/2 pounds red new potatoes (about 18), sliced 1/4-inch thick

1/4 cup plus 3 tablespoons olive oil

Kosher salt and black pepper 1/2 cup fresh flat-leaf parsley leaves

Heat oven to 425°F. On a large rimmed baking sheet, toss the potatoes with 2 tablespoons of the oil and 1/4 teaspoon each salt and pepper. Roast until golden, 25 to 30 minutes.

Meanwhile, in a food processor, process the parsley, pistachios, garlic, 1/4 cup of the remaining oil, and 1/4 teaspoon each salt and pepper until finely chopped.

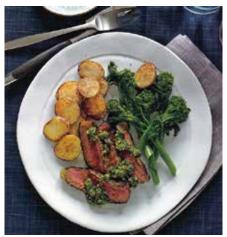

Heat the remaining tablespoon of oil in a large skillet over medium-high heat. Season the steaks with 1/2 teaspoon each salt and pepper and cook to the desired doneness, 4 to 6 minutes per side for medium rare. Transfer to a cutting board and let rest for at least 5 minutes before slicing.

1 small garlic clove 2 strip or sirloin steaks (1 inch thick; about

1/4 cup shelled roasted pistachios

2 strip or sirloin steaks (1 inch thick; about 11/2 pounds total)

1 bunch broccoli rabe (about 1 pound)

Wipe out the skillet. Add the broccoli rabe and 1/2 cup water and simmer, covered, until tender, 2 to 3 minutes. Serve with the steak, potatoes and pesto.

Tip: The pistachio pesto in this dish makes an excellent accompaniment to lamb, chicken, shrimp, or fish. Or serve it on toasted country bread for an easy appetizer.

An Upbeat Question of the week

By Helen Mosbrooker

What was the biggest turning point in your life, and how did that experience change you?

Stephanie Streitler, Oak Harbor

The biggest turning point of my life is when Peoples Bank recruited me from my previous institution to be the district manager of the Island District. Not only did I feel honored, but I now work for a company that values its employees, customers, and community. This experience has changed me because now my work allows me to be involved with the people of Island and Skagit Counties daily.

Arlinda Babcock, Greenbank

Interviewing for a new job and meeting the love of my life. Yes, I married the boss, and have had 44 wonderful years

Aryce Severson, Oak Harbor

Moving back to Washington. It showed me that I could go through hardship as long as I had a goal in mind and that mistakes I had made weren't permanent, I could move on. Without it, I would never have met my amazing husband (who didn't realize he was looking at a dating profile for Vancouver, Wash., instead of Vancouver, B.C.) and the wonderful life he introduced me to when we moved to this beautiful island.

Loren Imes, Clinton

When I met my wife. Not long after we met and started dating, I was accepted to a college across the country in southern California. We made the big decision to move there together. It was a very challenging program in an expensive city where we didn't know anyone and just barely knew each other. But it turned out to be the best decision of my life. I don't know if I would have made it through without her support and encouragement. I graduated, we got married, found good jobs and have two amazing children. She is responsible for so much of it.

If you are looking for a meaningful volunteer opportunity, look no further! When you volunteer at one of the Habitat for Humanity of Island County stores, you are helping local families attain decent, affordable housing. Income from the stores is vital to giving families a path to homeownership. We need people who can commit to help out in our Oak Harbor or Freeland store at least two-hours per week. Schedules are flexible. Our friendly volunteers provide customer service, help with receiving donated household items and furniture, and maintain the store. We also need drivers and driver helpers who will professionally represent Habitat as they pick up donated items using our trucks. Please call either store for more information. Oak Harbor: 360-675-8733, Freeland: 360-331-6272.
